

Field of Dreams Community Park

Habitat for Humanity is known for building decent, affordable homes that give low-income families a path to stability and upward mobility. Our Field of Dreams project is an eco-community of 20 high-efficiency twin homes in Kearns, Utah. What sets this neighborhood apart is a central community park, providing a safe, welcoming, and culturally relevant space where children and families can spend healthy time together outdoors and build community. The park will connect people, creating the social cohesion that makes communities thrive.

Park amenities include a playground, swing set, picnic pavilion, volleyball court, multi-sport court for pickleball and basketball, and green space with water-wise plants and trees. As the only park within a half-mile, the Field of Dreams Park will serve more than 600 people annually.

About Salt Lake Valley Habitat for Humanity

Since 1986, Salt Lake Valley Habitat for Humanity (Habitat) has been building affordable and decent homes, making critical home repairs, and operating our ReStore building materials thrift store. We have helped more than 100 low-income families become first-time homeowners, breaking the cycle of intergenerational poverty. Over 600 people have benefited from our Critical Home Repair Program, which mitigates health and safety issues. Thousands of people shop at our ReStore annually for low-cost household items, appliances, furniture, and home improvement materials. The ReStore keeps 681 tons of repurposed material out of landfills each year! As a highly collaborative organization, we leverage our resources in partnership with those of the government, nonprofit and for-profit agencies, and our sister Habitat affiliates across the state of Utah.
